UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN JOSE DIVISION

LENOVO (UNITED STATES) INC., et al.,
Plaintiffs,
v.
IPCOM GMBH & CO., KG, Defendant.

Case No. 19-cv-01389-EJD (VKD)

ORDER RE SUBMISSION OF DISCOVERY DISPUTES

14 The parties advise that they have at least six disputes concerning eight categories of 15 documents that plaintiffs seek from defendant. Dkt. No. 89. They propose submitting a single 16 joint discovery letter brief addressing the remaining disputes, organized by dispute. They agree
17 they need more than the 1,500 words each permitted in the undersigned's Standing Order for Civil 18 Cases to explain their disputes to the Court, but cannot agree on how many more words would be 19 sufficient.

20 The parties may organize their submission however they wish. If the disputes are related 21 and narrower than the parties' original discovery dispute submission (Dkt. No. 75), the Court is 22 skeptical that the parties truly need to exceed the 1,500-word limit for their respective statements
23 of their positions. However, to accommodate the parties, and with a view toward expediting the 24 completion of jurisdictional discovery, the Court will permit each side 3,000 words for their
25 statements of their positions. The Court encourages the parties to include all remaining issues
26 concerning plaintiffs' jurisdictional discovery of defendant in their next discovery dispute
27 submission, but only after they have seriously conferred in an effort to reach agreement without 28 the Court's assistance.

1 IT IS SO ORDERED.
